McCarter & English, LLP is pleased to announce the addition of Frederick C. Biehl, III to the firm's Business Litigation group as a partner in the Newark office. Biehl has more than 35 years of experience focusing on commercial litigation, business disputes, and mergers and acquisitions.

"Fred is a highly-regarded attorney and a trusted advocate for the businesses he serves," said Thomas J. Finn, chair of the firm's Business Litigation group. "Fred's arrival is a continuation of our Business Litigation group's strategic growth, and we are confident that his transactional and commercial real estate experience paired with his trial experience and high level of service will be an asset to our clients."

Biehl's litigation practice is focused primarily on business disputes, shareholder and partner disputes, trade secrets and construction defects. He has litigated matters in federal and state courts throughout the country. Additionally, Biehl has extensive experience forming business entities, commercial agreements, and financing real estate transactions for a range of private and publicly traded companies. He often serves as an external general counsel for small companies.

"McCarter's reputation for outstanding client service and their large group of skilled attorneys was a huge draw for me," said Biehl. "I look forward to collaborating with this impressive team and working on strategic solutions for our clients."

Biehl received his J.D. (cum laude) from Whittier College School of Law and his B.S. from Seton Hall University. He also has an L.L.M. in Taxation from New York University.
