

Distributor Ratemaking Procedures

Chapter 41, Energy Law and Transactions (LexisNexis Matthew Bender)

01.01.2019

Related People:

John P. Gregg

A distributor ordinarily begins the ratemaking process by filing a rate change with the state regulatory commission.¹ Investigations by state regulatory bodies in response to customer companies or on their own motion may lead to changes in a distributor's rates as well. This chapter discusses the formal and substantive requirements for, and the nature and extent of the proceedings that lead to, the approval or rejection of the rate.