We've learned a lot about supply chain disruptions this year. Real-time inventory visibility across the entire business is the most critical component of a reliable supply chain. Without it, we're forced to wait until issues manifest themselves in the form of stock-outs or a halted production line.

Supply chain experts from McCarter & English, NetSuite, and Reverse Logistics Association talked about:

- Key learnings from COVID-19's impact on logistics and fulfillment
- How a more localized supply chain improves reliability and reduces risk
- How technology helps you visualize the supply chain and take action in real time
- Why now is the time to update your systems
