

The Coronavirus Survival Guide – How Federal Contractors Can Minimize Impacts While Maximizing Revenue

Related People:

Alexander W. Major
Zlatko “Zack” Hadzismajlovic
Franklin C. Turner

Federal Publications Seminars

03.27.2020

As the impacts of the coronavirus ripple through the federal contracting community, contractors of all sizes and types are understandably concerned about weathering the storm. In this interactive discussion, veteran government contracts and global trade attorneys from McCarter & English will advise contractors on the range of available remedies in the face of work stoppages, telework demands, supply chain interruptions, and other challenges to meeting performance obligations.

The McCarter & English team will discuss the rapidly developing and expanding fast track contracting methods now being utilized by agencies, the impact and ramifications of the invocation of the Defense Production Act, and the business opportunities available in this era of unprecedented federal spending and future recovery efforts. This webinar will include a robust discussion of critical contract clauses, strategic internal and external communication plans, the impact of tariffs, border and travel restrictions on supply chains and logistics, and new vectors for business development.

This live webinar is eligible for both CLE and CPE credit.

NOTE: CPE/CLE credit for attendees are subject to participation and approval by the governing boards.