

Q&A: Hartford Lawyers Decode CT's Business Litigation Landscape

Hartford Business Journal

02.03.2014

Related People:

Thomas J. Finn

Paula Cruz Cedillo

Q&A talks about business litigation in Connecticut with McCarter & English LLP business and financial services litigation group partners Thomas J. Finn and Paula Cruz Cedillo.

Q: You've co-authored a new book entitled Connecticut Business Litigation. What's the primary purpose behind the book and who is its primary audience?

A: The primary purpose behind the book was to provide an initial resource of business litigation topics for lawyers who litigate in federal and state courts in Connecticut, as well as business attorneys and advisors that counsel businesses in ways to avoid or minimize litigation. The book covers many complex topics that are litigated in Connecticut, including securities litigation, director & officer liability, antitrust, unfair trade practices, intellectual property, ERISA, information technology & e-commerce, RICO, as well as other topics. We endeavored to provide an overview of these complex topics with enough depth to be beneficial and helpful, without providing too much information that it loses its value as an initial resource.

Click here for full article.