Thomas Finn is chairman of McCarter & English's business litigation group for the firm's nine locations. Based in Hartford, Finn oversees the work of about 65 to 70 business litigators and 35 partners.

As if that was not enough responsibility, Finn has also maintained his entire caseload since getting the promotion nearly two years ago.

Over the past year, Finn has taken the lead on numerous significant cases, including extensive work in preventing the federal government from pursuing civil and criminal charges against a nuclear missile backup battery manufacturer.

Finn, who handles cases all over the country, also currently represents clients such as DraftKings, Aetna and Cigna.

In honor of all of Finn's accomplishments in the past year, he has been nominated as one of the candidates for the Connecticut Law Tribune's Lawyer of the Year.

"It's a privilege to chair such a large and active group within McCarter & English," Finn said. "While it does take a significant amount of work, it is a pleasure to be able to serve in that capacity."
